Not Durable Enough

Picture Description¹⁾

A weathered political poster advocating for solidarity during the Corona crisis is displayed on a graffiti-covered wall.

Analysis¹⁾

This photograph captures a weathered poster clinging to a graffiti-covered wall, revealing the remnants of a bygone era. The poster, titled 'CORONA EINDE,' likely addresses pandemic-related concerns. The photograph showcases layers of visual history, the decay and vandalism adding texture and depth to the composition. The interplay of the peeling poster, the colorful graffiti, and the rough wall surface creates a compelling contrast between the ephemeral nature of political messages and the enduring presence of urban art.
