Under Trees I

Picture Description¹⁾

A self-portrait in shadow with tree branches sprawling across a grassy hillside.

Analysis¹⁾

This photograph captures a stark and evocative scene of nature and self-reflection. The composition is dominated by the elongated shadows of bare trees stretching across a grassy slope. These dark, linear shapes create a dynamic contrast against the subtle variations of green and brown in the landscape. In the foreground, the distinct silhouette of the photographer is prominently cast, acting as a personal intrusion into the serene natural setting. The interplay of light and shadow, coupled with the perspective, emphasizes the artist's presence within the scene, prompting contemplation about the relationship between the observer and the observed.
