Entering Memmingen III

Picture Description¹⁾

A silhouette of a clock tower is contrasted with a snowboard hanging from a wire above, set against a bright sky.

Analysis¹⁾

This black and white photograph presents a stark and compelling silhouette of a clock tower against a bright, overcast sky. The composition is dominated by the tower's sharp, angular form, which ascends towards the top of the frame. A horizontal wire stretches across the upper portion of the photograph, suspending a shadow of a lamp. The clock face, though mostly obscured, reveals illuminated hands, suggesting the passage of time within this seemingly timeless setting. The high contrast and monochromatic palette lend the photograph a dramatic and slightly surreal quality.
